"The weather during the past week was unsettled, and wheat discolored. The grain trade has changed but little. Delivaries of English wheat at the principal country mar-kets are falling off, while at Mark Line the offerings were light. Trade is flat, and lower prices would have been necessary to effect the sale of any but the choicest parcels. But growers were firm in spite of an improveent in the appearance of the home crop, and there has been but little pressure to sell. Foreign imports have been considerable, the returns on Friday showing the arrival of 41,180 quarters, which rendered sales difficult except in such quantities as the present needs justified. The requirements of country millers kept sellers oc-cupied and prevented any depreciation of value. Barley quiet, both multing and grinding sorts. Oats receded a little under pres-sure of supplies, but a temporary so wently of the efforts made by the committee to bring maize on the spot enabled sellers to obtain very full prices for both round and flat corn. Arrivals of wheat and maize at ports were more liberal the past week. Wheat met with a dragging sale off the coast at ugaltered prices, while maize was dail. For-ward wheat and maize have been offered daily in moderate quantities; prices un-changed. The demand for both was quiet, and there was no speculative inquiry. Sales of English wheat last week, 44 546 quarters, at 41s 4d, against 22,994 quarters, at 47s 10d,

> Senator Conkling asked Senator Withers, who had charge of the bill, to explain the meaning of that part of section 5 (formerly known as section 6) which says "No part of the money appropriated shall be paid for the President and authorities to employ the Senator Withers said the troops could be used to keep the peace at polls in any other manner than as a police force. The bill had apparently been attempted to give the idea in another place that the bill only pre-vented the army from being used as a civil police force, but it seemed to be pretty generally understood that its real intent was to prevent the President from using the army to execute the laws of the United States and o preserve peace. He did not intend to speak against the bill at length, but moved the following: At the end of section 5 add these words "Except in aid of civil authorities." Senator Voorhees asked Senator Conkling whether he was in favor of using the army at the polls on election days.

Senator Cookling replied that he was in favor of executing the laws when necessary by the aid of the military power, on all days and at all places, including the places where the polls are held at elections, on election that we have a law at the present time that authorizes the President to interpose the army Senator Conkling said that there was more than one provision requiring the President to see to it that the laws are faithfully executed at all times and places.

Senator Voorhees said that he had asked the question to see how much harmony there was in the Republican party. A leader of that party elsewhere had lately said, in reply to the same inquiry: "I think that we have not, that we never had it, and that we never ought to have it in time of peace. Senator Conkling asked Senator Voorhees if he was in favor of that proposition him-

Senator Voorhees answered that he would signing accepted the resignation with regret.

Mr. Hayes [iii]—Was the gentleman asleep when Buchanan, and Floyd, and Cobb, control elections on election day. We say we will not allow the use of the troops to keep peace at the polis, and we do it because we have faith in the capacity of the people preserve peace themselves. Senutor Carpenter asked Senator Voorhee if the people are any more capable of keep ing peace on election day than on any other Senator Voornees said they were, in sense. All the people were out on that day for a good purpose, and though the bad class were out too, the good element prevailed.

and the issue was the present bill. He was persuaded that it was no other motive but a corrupt political motive that deterred the gentlemen on the other side from considering the bill.

Mr. Conger—That is an infamous assertion from the gentleman, and I say to him here in my place—and the issue was the present bill. He was portunity to have fair play in the bill by offering the following amendment, which is substantially like the one offered by him to the first army appropriation bill, and which he supported by the same line of argument as he then used: At the end of section 5 add the words, "Provided, however, that any persons of any play in the bill by offering the following amendment, which is substantially like the one offered by him to the first army appropriation bill, and which he supported by the same line of argument as he then used: At the end of section 5 add the words, "Provided, however, that any persons of any play in the bill by offering the following amendment, which is supported by the same line of argument as he then used: At the end of section 5 add the words, "Provided here are a supported by the same line of argument as he then used: At the end of section 5 add the words, "Provided here are a supported by the same line of argument as he then used: At the end of section 5 add the words are a supported by the same line of argument as he then used at least give an opportunity to have fair play in the bill. A great deal of noise and confusion son who shall carry deadly weapons of any onment, at the discretion of the court.' Senator Voorhees having spoken of three Massachusetts regiments who interfered in the election in Indiana in 1864, Sepator Blaine thought there must have been some thing extraordinary about these troops. He had heard of them ever since as having iroubled nearly all the places in Indiana. Senator M'Donaid read a letter from an eye-witness of certain transactions at Inlianapolis, tending to show that the Massachusetts troops were not mythical. A long discussion ensued, and Senator Conkling asked Senator Voorhees why he supposed the troops were there. senator Voorhees said he believed it was to recruit Indiana negroes to fill up the Massachusetts regiments. Senator Windom read a long report of Jacob Thompson to the Confederate govern-ment about the "Sons of Liberty" in Indiana, indicating, according to Senator Windom, that these Massachusetts froops were sent into Indiana to suppress that treasonable organusation, and succeeded in hindering their operations. Senator Withers suggested that all the re bellion records should be read. Senator M'Donald replied to Senator Win dom. He denied that Thompson's letter proved anything or had anything to do with this, and denounced any assertion that threw doubt upon the Lyalty of Indiana. Every of Union troops.

Senator Beck read affidavits to prove mili tary interference at the polls in 1865. Senator Windom said he would endeavor to secure a vote on the pending question before adjournment to-morrow.
